The following factions are all good choices for destroying Carthage:

- Rome: The Roman Empire is one of the most powerful factions in the game, with a strong economy, powerful military, and experienced generals.
- Carthage: If you want to experience the challenge of destroying Carthage from the inside, you can choose to play as Carthage itself. Carthage has a strong navy and a prosperous economy, but it is also surrounded by enemies.
- Macedon: Macedon is a powerful Greek kingdom with a strong military and a talented king. Macedon is a good choice for players who want to conquer Greece and then use it as a base to launch an invasion of Carthage.
- Egypt: Egypt is a wealthy and populous kingdom with a strong economy and a powerful military. Egypt is a good choice for players who want to build up a large empire and then use it to overwhelm Carthage.

Managing Your Economy

The key to success in Total War: Rome is managing your economy. You need to make sure that you have enough money to build and maintain your armies, as well as to pay for research and other expenses.

The following tips can help you manage your economy:

- Build up your infrastructure: The first step to a strong economy is to build up your infrastructure. This includes building roads, farms, mines, and other buildings that will help you generate income.

- Tax your people: Taxation is a necessary evil in Total War: Rome. You need to tax your people in order to generate income, but you need to be careful not to tax them too heavily, or they will rebel.
- Trade with other factions: Trading with other factions is a great way to make money and get access to resources that you don't have in your own territory.
- Keep an eye on your expenses: It's important to keep an eye on your expenses and make sure that you're not spending more money than you're making.

Leading Your Armies to Victory

Once you have a strong economy, you can start building and maintaining a powerful army. The following tips can help you lead your armies to victory:

- Train the right units: The type of units that you train will depend on your faction and your playstyle. However, it's important to have a mix of units in your army, including infantry, cavalry, and artillery.
- Position your units wisely: The way you position your units in battle can have a big impact on the outcome. Make sure to use your terrain to your advantage and to protect your flanks.
- Use your generals wisely: Generals are powerful units that can give your army a big boost in battle. Make sure to use your generals to lead your charges and to inspire your troops.
- Be patient: Battles in Total War: Rome can be long and bloody. It's important to be patient and to stick to your plan. Don't try to rush things, or you'll risk losing your army.

Destroying Carthage

Once you have conquered Greece and Egypt, you can start planning your invasion of Carthage. The following tips can help you destroy Carthage and conquer the Mediterranean:

- Build up a large navy: Carthage is a naval power, so you'll need to build up a large navy to defeat them.
- Invade Carthage from multiple directions: Don't try to invade Carthage from just one direction. Instead, invade from multiple directions to divide their forces.
- Siege Carthage: Once you have invaded Carthage, you'll need to siege their cities. Use your siege weapons to break down their walls and then storm their cities.
- Be prepared for a long war: The war against Carthage will be long and bloody. Be prepared to lose some battles, but don't give up.

Destroying Carthage is a challenging but rewarding experience in Total War: Rome. If you follow the tips in this guide, you'll be well on your way to conquering the Mediterranean and becoming the master of the Roman Empire.
